Yes, girls, again, real eyebrows are an essential part of your make-up. At the present time, many girls are wearing their eyebrows natural, or shaped in so that they are barely perceptible, in order to get that look. War Against Carbon Monoxide Gas in Homes

Poison gas killed 1,950 Americans last year. Carbon monoxide was the poisonous gas in eight out of every nine cases, and 97 per cent of the victims were stricken in their own homes.

Safety principles for avoiding monoxide poisoning in the home include:

1. Be sure that the damper in a stove or furnace pipe is never closed tightly enough to force gases out into the room. It is better to regulate "draw" with a check draft.

2. A flue pipe to carry away burned gases is always necessary for gas ovens and water heaters.

3. Gas burners should burn with a transparent blue flame. If the flame has a white or yellow tint, adjustment is necessary.

4. Never operate a gasoline engine in a closed place unless the exhaust is piped out of doors. Close shed doors before starting the truck, car or tractor.

Spreading Varnish

Here is what happens when tops of furniture are flooded with varnish and erroneously expected to dry hard: The heavy coat of varnish sets quickly and the surface seals over. As a result, solvent is trapped underneath and the air can't get in to oxidize the oils. A slight temperature change at this stage will cause checking. If packed soon, such a film will print. But even if you avoid these troubles, there are others lying in wait. After a week or ten days, when the varnish may be presumed to be dry, it will scratch the film you will find it brittle and spongy once the surface is broken through. It marks easily and flakes off without difficulty. The film, instead of shrinking to a hard, dense film, has a porous structure like bread or cake. A normal coat of the same varnish will produce a hard, tough, adherent film, proving that the varnish itself is not finally brittle. If you want to get good results with present-day furniture varnishes, don't put any more on the tops than you do on fronts and ends. If you must have a heavier film on the tops, apply an extra coat rather than attempt to put it all on at once.

Good Washing Whitens

Wash clothes well and you will not have to boil, bleach or blue them. None of these whitening methods is a good substitute for correct washing and rinsing, say home economists. If clothes are not allowed to become too soiled, and then are thoroughly washed and rinsed in hot soft water, other whitening should not be necessary. Boiling is recommended only for sterilizing clothing, bedding and handkerchiefs after illness. It is a possible health hazard to the housewife who goes directly outdoors into the cold. However, boiling is a cheaper way to whiten than using a commercial bleach, and it is easier on the fabric. Boiling does not whiten clothes but makes them look white by camouflaging the yellow or dinginess left by poor washing.

Keep cutting pulpwood.

War Cost 1 Trillion 384 Billion Dollars

WASHINGTON — Want to know what World War II cost the world? According to a survey by James H. Brady and American university here, it was about $1,154,000,000,000 for armament and war materials and about $230,000,000,000 in property damage, a total of $1,384,000,000,000.

That doesn't include cost of armaments and property damage in China, for which figures were not available.

The survey placed U. S. expenditures for war material at $317,000,000,000 against $192,000,000,000 and the United Kingdom $120,000,000,000. The war cost of Axis powers about $468,859,000,000.

Wives to Join Yanks in Italy by Next Spring

ROME — A plan whereby the wives and families of a number of United States officers and possibly enlisted men of the 88th division may join them here in the spring is under study and at least one officer already has been told he may bring his family in May, he said. The 88th is on occupation duty in the provinces of Venezia Giulia and Friuli in the far northeast corner of Italy, close to the Yugoslav border. The wives will be billeted on the Lido at Venice.

Wartime Output of Radio Industry Sets Record

With a total war output of approximately 7¼ billion dollars, the radio industry produced nearly twice as much radio-radar communications equipment during the war than it produced radio equipment alone for civilian use in all the years since commercial radio began about 1922.

From January, 1942, until the war ended in 1945, the industry's war production mounted to the huge total of $7,220,000,000, the records show. In addition, the industry produced about $250,000,000 in military equipment from September, 1941, until the end of that year, bringing the aggregate contribution to the war effort to close to the 7¼ billion dollar mark.

Best industry and trade statistics show that in the entire period of civilian radio beginning in 1922, the total volume of radio equipment manufactured was about $4,225,000,000, not including transmitting and communications equipment, the association announced. This is some 3¼ billion dollars less than the production total for war.

Texas Cities

One index to the development of Texas during the past century is the growth of its towns. San Antonio tops the list for age, having been started with the building of the first mission in 1718; but it had only a few thousand inhabitants in 1845. Now its metropolitan area has a population close to 400,000. Some of the important Texas cities of today were little more than villages when the state entered the union. That is true of Houston, now the ranking municipality of Texas with more than half a million people in its metropolitan area; Austin, which has a population of 110,000; Beaumont which now counts 77,000 inhabitants, and Galveston with 72,000. Crowded cities of today which were not even born a hundred years ago are Dallas whose metropolitan area holds more than 400,000 people; Fort Worth with a population of 210,000; El Paso with 107,000; Corpus Christi with 85,000; and Waco with 65,000.
